5. Number the answers exactly as the questions are numbered.
6. Leave adequate spacing between each answer.
7. Do not write in the margins; leave these blank for the recording of marks.
8. The marks allocated to each question will indicate the detail required.
9. Calculators may be used.
10. It is in your interest to write legibly and to present your work neatly.
SECTION A FOOD AND NUTRITION AND THE CONSUMER

QUESTION 1

Refer to the extract from the article on eating disorders, 'Dying to be thin' below, when answering Question 1.

Dying to be thin by Delia du Toit

"Disordered eating is any erratic and unhealthy eating. Even a woman with a healthy BMI of 25 could fall under this category. All these behaviours have detrimental effects on our health, and when it is allowed to continue and develop, you'll see an eating disorder. A true disorder, unfortunately, is only diagnosed when the BMI is as low as 16 or 17 – when the damage has been done" says Tabitha Hume, a Johannesburg-based dietician.

[Health Intelligence magazine, July/August 2014, Issue 28]

Tabulate questions 1.1 – 1.3 as shown below.

1.1 Name two eating disorders that could result in a low BMI. (2)
1.2 State one typical type of behaviour that is characteristic of each. (2)
1.3 Give one observable symptom of each disorder. (2)

16.2 Explain three problems created by waste and waste disposal in the modern world. (3)
QUESTION 17

Read the extracts below, taken from an article in The Weekend Witness December 2014, and answer Question 17.1 to 17.5.

Property has fared well

"The property market has fared relatively well in 2014 considering the estimated economic growth rate of only 1.4%. There is demand for residential property after many years of difficult economic conditions," said Rhys Dyer, CEO of Ooba, South Africa's largest bond originator.

"We expect to see a stable market for home-loan approvals in 2015," said Dyer. "On the positive side, interest rates have remained relatively low, making it a good time for first-time homeowners …"

Ooba's home-loan approval rate was 72% in the third quarter of 2014.

"Sectional-title smaller homes close to city centres will likely show greater growth in 2015 … and will be able to demand higher rentals," he said.

[Source: Weekend Witness, December 2014]

QUESTION 20

COMPARISON OF THE CARBON 'FOODPRINT' OF 5 DIETS

It is well understood that producing, packaging and distributing enough food for the world has a huge impact on the natural environment. Meat production in particular has a big carbon footprint.

Numerous studies detail the climate impact of livestock, but just how big is its impact on a person's 'foodprint'?

This post compares the carbon footprints of five different diets and finds that when it comes to 'foodprints', vegans lead the way.

Ever since the FAO announced that 18% of global emissions result from livestock, people have talked about the climate benefits of reducing meat consumption.

Note:
- Each diet is based on 2 600 kcal per day (about 10 920 kilojoules).
- Each of these five diets are variations of the average American diet based on data from the USDA's Economic Research Service (USDA = US Department of Agriculture).
- The 'no beef' diet is the average diet but chicken is eaten instead of beef.
- An average diet is based on the food groups/food pyramid.
- t CO$_2$e means tons of carbon dioxide equivalent; this is a measure that allows you to compare other greenhouse gas emissions to CO$_2$ (carbon dioxide).
- FAO is the Food and Agriculture Organisation.

Use the information provided in the resource material above to answer the following questions:

• Show your understanding of the term 'carbon footprint'. Why do you think the article refers to 'carbon foodprints'? (3)
• According to the Food and Agriculture Organisation (FAO) '18% of global emissions result from the production of livestock'. Provide a detailed explanation of the negative environmental impact of meat production and consumption. Consider the factors below in your discussion:
  • Agriculture
  • Transport
  • Processing
  • Packaging
  • Retail and distribution
  • Consumption

• Suggest reasons why the five diets shown have such differing impacts on the natural environment.
