QUESTION 1 (ESSAY QUESTION)

TO KILL A MOCKINGBIRD

NOTE: Use the 35-mark assessment rubric on page 37 to assess candidates' essays.

- How parents shape their children's lives
  - Mr Radley and Boo Radley
    - Mr Radley has his own strict ways of disciplining Boo.
    - He punishes Boo by locking him up for many years.
    - In doing so, Mr Radley robs Boo of the opportunity to lead a normal life.
    - Boo becomes a recluse.
    - Boo does not have any skills at socialising with other people.
    - Boo committed a petty crime. His father did not want him to trouble anyone again so he confined him to their house.
  - Mr Atticus Finch and Jem and Scout
    - Atticus teaches his children to respect others, e.g. he tells his children not to trouble Boo and he teaches Jem to show respect towards Mrs Dubose.
    - Atticus teaches his children not to be racist, e.g. he treats Calpurnia with respect and defends Tom Robinson.
    - He tells his children to be responsible, e.g. when he gives them their air- rifles. He tells them not to shoot mockingbirds.

- How society shapes children's lives
  - Boo

    - Aunt Alexandra attempts to shape Scout by making her more feminine. Instead, Scout becomes rebellious.
    - Calpurnia and her community shape Jem and Scout's lives by teaching them religious values.
• How children shape their own lives

QUESTION 9 (ESSAY QUESTION)

NOTHING BUT THE TRUTH

NOTE: Use the 35-mark assessment rubric on page 37 to assess candidates' essays.

The following points may be included in the essay, among others, but allow for candidates' own interpretation as well:

- The relationship between Sipho and Themba
  - Sipho, being the elder sibling, should have realised and accepted that he had to compromise on many things.
  - Sipho should have realised that attention given to younger siblings is normal in most families.
  - He ought to have been more generous with his possessions, since younger siblings do appreciate gifts from elder ones. He should not have over-reacted to the incident with the wire bus.
  - The incident where Themba lost Sipho's blazer could have been an honest mistake. He should have realised that demands made by younger siblings are a way of testing acceptance and love.
  - While Themba disappointed Sipho deeply by having an affair with his wife, Sipho should have kept in mind that he himself and his wife were also to blame for the betrayal.
  - Sipho is a more conservative person as compared to the more outgoing and liberal Themba. It is, therefore, understandable that Themba would be more popular.
  - Sipho blames Themba for the chaos at their father's funeral, but the unrest at the time was not brought about by Themba. Politicians probably turned many funerals into political rallies during that time.

- Sipho's relationship with Luvuyo
  - Sipho could have made a bigger effort to become closer to his son.
  - It is understandable that a young boy would idolise a charismatic person like Themba, as opposed to his more conservative father, Sipho.

- Sipho's ambitions for a better career
  - Sipho should not be bitter about his parents not being able to send him to university. They were still poor when he wanted to start his studies. Only after receiving the money from an insurance payout and with Sipho's help, could they send Themba to university. He should not hold this against Themba or his parents.
  - Sipho should have realised that apartheid would take away some opportunities – his rejection by the law firm to be an articled clerk is but one example.
  - Sipho should not have had the unrealistic ambition to be appointed as Chief Librarian in a white library.
  - When this became possible after apartheid, he was too old.
